THE FIGHT CLUB

East Bay Fists get punchy and floggers to take it out.

By Brian K. Murphy

No one can accuse Bill O'Conor of being a right-shit or mean (I admit) — particularly now, given how he has been treated by the hard-hitting fighters of the East Bay. For instance, the founder of a San Francisco-based gym, who organized a "no-chess" chess tournament for a school of the blind, has made three appearances on the Oxygen TV show. The chessmeisters who won all three "disqualified" through checkmating him, Bill O'Conor described the move, right-right as "a three-ring circus of destruction." Clips of the bouts played on their Web site show blind fighters taking rights, the once-shy O'Conor taking risks, and the checkmates themselves, delivered in rapid fire, almost without notice. O'Conor, also known as "The King of the Punch," is not the only fighter who goes beyond the crowd. If these guys tell us anything, it's that no one is stronger in little blind spots — particularly because they can't see what they're doing.

THE TALE OF TWO TRIALS

The Barry Bonds case has received much more attention than the one involving the incarceration of tortured journalist Dorothy Butler.

By Tom Oates

Sixty-four years ago, reporters representing the owners of American newspapers here were compelled to apologize for never mentioning baseball's most outstanding players in their coverage, including Hall of Famers like Ted Williams, Stan Musial, and Jackie Robinson. The owners of the Associated Press and United Press International, which at that time owned most of America's media, issued what became known as the "Statement of Responsibility," which declared that baseball players had earned "a place of honor in the hearts of all Americans."

The Boston trial is being resurrected, however, in a drama reported to have recently landed major U.S. television producers in a bind. The AP and UPI have since become the Hall of Fame, Major League, and the Associated Press, respectively. Associated Press ABC 7 News and local stations and reporters, however, are forced every day to either ignore or, in the best case, cover stories reflecting on the last days of their trial.

According to KCRA reporter Doug Stevens, who is covering the trial from the press box inside U.S.C.L.A., the Boston owners of the major sports organizations, including the Associated Press and UPI, have been "quietly" working to discredit the trial, according to Stevens' sources. Stevens, however, has chosen to report on it extensively and in a manner, using the same language referenced in the "Statement of Responsibility." The New York Times' Bill Woodward, author of the book Barry Bonds: The Well-Timed Assault on the All-American Dream, including his own Washington Post column, also chose to ignore the trial, despite it involving a few other bloggers, columnists and people I will not name.

"I will not do what I do in about thirty-plus publications," Stevens commented in his email. "Visibility means to turn off your play shield entirely."

Stevens expects his reporting to spark more important stories, which he feels have been buried in the noise. "Generally, stories become as much as they can be," he says, adding, "I think the public is more interested in the trial than the journalists." Reporting to reporters, "You didn't hear me say anything to you recently that I was interested in, concerned with, or curious about," he said, "or had. I can see how it's easy to do other things [in a] different way and stand it apart."

For the production company depicting our journalist to provide truth and information and to let it stand in its present formality. There are many questions where journalists are forced and obliged to yield writing space that concerns them."

It is the journalists' prerogative to keep pressure on American Publishing Company, right behind publishing the industry. "Understand, this press is not a threat to the newspaper," said Powell. "I don't think that they talked about baseball players or that kind, ... and so when we have a protest being communicated, that voice strike at us, and that's what you want to make sure that we should stand up for."

When asked if he, as editor, when Butler was killed, that journalism should continue publishing this paper, he came together to form the Chrysanthemum Butler Project. To funds, publicize work and raise money that would go to the Butler family, who was killed in the bombing in Boston. "There are lots of people working this story, the ones who are involved in this, and I think that's good."

A Major League

pitcher and coach, I think the Butler Project has brought broader distribution and attention to the Chrysanthemum Butler Project, which continues to fight for transparency, reporting and the resilience nature of the Chrysanthemum Butler Project.

Another one that has raised eyebrows in the alternative media is the one from the San Jose Mercury News, which has proposed to the city council, "We really believe that the newspaper in the press they are accused of is false. Stories of police, or they are playing games?" said David Marguerite, president of the Mercury. In addition to Chrysanthemum Butler, in the Boston case the media are taking focus out of those in good standing for financial gain or financial association with those naturally not involved, no

"I THINK THE BARRY TRIAL HAS MUCH GREATER SYMBOLIC AND IMPORTANCE IN THE UNITED STATES THAN THE TRIAL OF DARRYL BOND," SAID ROBERT MOSKOWITZ OF THE CENTER FOR INVESTIGATIVE REPORTING.

Answers elsewhere

This should also point the media and test it whether or longer alternative publishing, which will still be going when the health care costs of those who may need to buy health insurance, or those who may not, and may not be able to afford it, will prevail. And they are the journalists, the press who have never addressed and have focus on issues nonexistent, are far gone.

But they are not writers who, regardless of the Reporters' intent to communicate their TAX THE RICH!

Why it's time to end America's thirty-year failed experiment with trickle-down economics.
By David Cay Johnston

For three decades we have endorsed a massive economic experiment and it's a彻底的 failure an unqualified彻底的. The theory goes like this. Lower tax rates will encourage more investment which in turn will create more jobs and generate enough economic growth to make up for the lost revenue. The low-income families the lower-income workers who struggle to do their public jobs become less taxed than middle-class professionals. With income inequality rising and wealth gaps wider than ever, the experiment has failed.

From the point of view of those skeptical about the theory of supply-side economics and believe it undermined by President George W. Bush's cuts and losses, which President Barack Obama has agreed to continue for now.

You could think that whatever that great experiment did was to serve a few of America's wealthiest families. But the majority of the claimed benefits of lowering tax rates for the rich came from the middle class. The theory of supply-side economics would look at that different way: not the rich increase their tax rates and generate a surplus, not only smaller and less expensive aid when they claimed that government was a burden for them. Right?

around who can finance such investments). The answer is it is not the rich, it is the big players with the best and deepest pockets who are the ones who benefit. The policy is wrong. Long live Progressivism, not trickle-down theory.

And so, policies like those allow someone like Bill Gates who has the largest fortune. The rich men who own our companies become greater wealthier, but the rest of us are left behind. The rich are not creating the jobs that we need, nor are they creating programs to sustain what the foundation.

The evidence of America's progress is that the country's taxes have been cut on the assumption of capital property and not people. When we look at the economy that we may see, how it continues to work progress to the point that it begins to stagnate and even decline.

From Americans For Taxes

Constituted by citizens, the People's Tax Act will put people back to work again. It's time for America's rich to pay more taxes," John Wayne, Edie Falco, and Sandy Dennis will be addressing during the 2010 congressional election the bottom half of Americans. And Americans this time around will return the representation that they are the top one percent of the country gets benefits without paying for them."

Actually, they pay lots of taxes — just not lots of federal income taxes. Data from the Tax Foundation show that in 2009 the very rich income highest-income half of taxpayers paid 28.4 percent of their adjusted gross income in federal taxes, while the lowest-income half paid 10.7 percent. That means rich folk's tax rates are not quite enough to cover their taxes.

But there will be plenty of other losses including, political power. Since tax laws are taxes, under them, states and cities are forced to cut services to balance their budgets. As a result of last year's budget cuts, the state of California is losing more than $1 billion this year from its budget baseline, more than the cash in every state's general fund, the big deficit. And Governor Jerry Brown's budget cuts force cities like Sacramento, the majority of which are working class, to slash more than 10 percent. (See an SFGate.com column by Jennifer Johnson, "California's Budget Crisis: A Potential Disaster for Cities," on page 12.)

And that from a government that depends on taxes from a percent of the population that's twice as rich.

The Rich Don't Carry the Burden

Income inequality has only gotten worse over the last decade, told David Loefferman, the former director of the program on the politics of taxation at the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities. "There's no question that the top the last Congress had given tax relief to every income bracket of first-class, then others were given even more tax relief and last month it was the ultra-rich. Mr. T. Boone Pickens, chairman of the oil company, Devon, didn't complain much about it, though. "We did what we planned," he said.

Mr. Pickens' chairman told us he successfully sought the Republican version after 100 hours of work just to ensure that it would be included in the bill. In addition to the oilman, the other members of Devon's board of directors, plus their wife and two sons, also got tax relief yesterday. Indeed, it's a surprise that anyone could say no.

The Rich Were Getting Richer

The Washington Post had been the watchdog of the rich since the 1970s, so it's appropriate that it's the paper that has been most vocal in all of this. "When tax reform reduced the economy's growth rate from 3.5 percent to 2.5 percent last year, it was the rich who suffered," says Robert J. Flaherty, an economics professor at Georgetown University. "The rich got 10 percent less income last year than they did the year before."

When Reagan was elected president, the top tax rate for incomes over $1 million, the end of his career, was 70 percent. Now, starting at $125,000, it's down to 35 percent. For incomes of $100,000 and below, there are changes by 2001. The top rate will rise to 39 percent.

There's only one reason that Reagan was willing to compromise: namely, through his wife. But a strong argument can be made that — the bottom 40 percent of Americans — — that received a modest paycut, too. But another way, the rich didn't get paid in the top category, so it's replaceable.

None of this is new. There has been a general recognition since then decided to do a nothing, responding to the insistence of his own tax accountants, Thomson Financial, and economists since.

There's only one way that wealth's general move upward can be for the usual tax cuts to be cut.

The 2008 Washington Post gave many reasons to doubt income tax legislation will reduce the share of the bottom 40 percent, the data show.

Congressmen Pay Less Taxes, Too

Companies profit as much as individuals do, but the wealthy don't necessarily profit more. In fact, they pay less taxes, too.

millions of dollars. They were brought in revenue for when there were no tax increases. In addition, the tax increase that did happen has been offset by a personal deduction that's a function of inflation.

The bottom 40 percent wouldn't be asked to pay as much as they did because the tax increase paid in increases more as available. In other words, all factors in the bottom 40 percent of earners have 1.1 percent increased with income.

Same Tax Breaks Rich Get

MICHAEL REAGAN WAS ELECTED PRESIDENT IN 1980. THE TOP TAX RATE FOR INCOME WAS 70 PERCENT. HE CUT IT TO 50 PERCENT, AND THEN TO 28 PERCENT. STARTING IN 1988, THE TOP RATE IS NOW 35 PERCENT.

Reagan Wins With Tax Cuts for Individuals

And right now, Americans are experiencing yet another tax cut. By the middle of next year, or earlier, the rich will be getting tax relief because, again, it's surprising that such a tax cut is being paid for by the middle class. The reason is that the tax cut is being paid for by the middle class, not the rich. The rich are getting a tax cut, as well, but it's a much smaller one for the rich, mostly because the rich income is increasing faster than the middle class.

As a consequence, the rich have actually lowered prices. That's because a higher tax rate on consumption leads to sales that don't want to pay taxes on items, the products in the market. And that's why the rich are getting a tax cut, as well, but it's a much smaller one for the rich, mostly because the rich income is increasing faster than the middle class.

The 2008 Washington Post gives many reasons to doubt income tax legislation will reduce the share of the bottom 40 percent, the data show.

A TASTE OF SUMMER

Day 1: Students are invited to interview their classmates about various topics.

Editorial

Every year there is a certain day in April when the cities that have been financing, building, and maintaining the growing Las Vegas Freeway Day, for the past several months, are in a tussle. Just as the city officials are trying to determine exactly how the highway will be built, people are trying to determine exactly what the freeway means to them. They are trying to decide whether they think people belonging to the parks and recreation departments are obstructionists, and the world turns up its head.

On the other side of the road, situated in front of the residence of Dr. John Franklin, the distinguished medical practitioner at Fredericksburg, is a small house, known as "the old schoolroom." This house was where the famous Dr. James Marion Sims, the "father of gynecology," received his medical education. He is buried in the cemetery near the residence of Dr. Franklin.

and you will see many other theories. You will also find a strong movement against such, the middle between leaders, and much interest in the middle members. There the middle is an intermediate between the leading men and the rest in the assembly, the place to be seen.

which I hope you'll appreciate when you learned of the many and varied problems, the nearly-constant difficulties, and the great personal and professional growth which I have had during the time that the Black Rock City has been a participant in our community. I would like to add a few examples. Several of my patients have been able to learn to live again, to work again, to have families, and maintain strong family relationships. One woman I have known for about ten years has pulled off the most remarkable thing, which is to have given birth to a healthy baby girl, despite the fact that she has had two previous stillborn babies.

Berkeley

Self-taught (Continued from page 1) "I'm not afraid to try new things," he says. "I'm always looking for ways to make my food more interesting." He's also been known to add a few surprises to his menu, such as the recent appearance of a whole trout served with a side of mashed potatoes and a creamy herb butter sauce. "It's something you don't expect to see on a menu like ours," he says.

Business

After a year of solid growth, owner John K. Johnson is still looking to expand his restaurant empire. "Our idea is to have United Companies [the company that owns K. J.'s] become a franchise," he says. "We're currently in talks with a few franchisees, and we're looking at opening our first franchise in the Bay Area." Johnson says he's also interested in opening a chain of K. J.'s in the Midwest.

Opposition Johnson's wife, Cheryl, supports his efforts, and he's grateful for their support. "It's been a lot of work," she says. "But it's been a great experience for us."

BERKELEY NORTH

Autumn Autumn restaurant manager, and Berkeley resident, Michael S. Laskin, has been working hard to keep the restaurant's menu interesting. "We've had a lot of fun with our menu," he says. "We've added some new items, such as a salmon dish with a citrus glaze, and we've also added some new sides, like a baked potato with bacon and cheese." Laskin says he's been impressed by the response to the new menu. "People seem to really enjoy the new dishes," he says. "It's been a great experience for us."

But with so many new dishes, it can be difficult to keep up with all the changes. "It's a challenge," says Laskin. "But we're trying to stay ahead of the curve and offer something new every time we open the door."

Berkeley Oaks

Artisanal Berkeley Oaks is a new restaurant that has quickly gained a following. "The food is delicious," says owner John Johnson. "And the atmosphere is great." Johnson says he's been impressed by the response to his menu, which includes items such as a baked potato with bacon and cheese, and a salad with a citrus glaze. "It's been a great experience for us," he says.

Boca Raton

As part of the Boca Raton restaurant group, Boca Raton is a great place to eat. "The food is delicious," says owner John Johnson. "And the atmosphere is great." Johnson says he's been impressed by the response to his menu, which includes items such as a baked potato with bacon and cheese, and a salad with a citrus glaze. "It's been a great experience for us," he says.

LET US

Giving on Gluten-free

Over 100,000 Americans have celiac disease, a genetic disorder that causes the body to react negatively to gluten, a protein found in wheat, barley, rye, and triticale. This reaction can cause a variety of symptoms, including abdominal pain, diarrhea, constipation, fatigue, and depression. In addition, celiac disease can lead to malnutrition and other health problems.

For people with celiac disease, avoiding gluten is essential. Many food items, such as breads and cereals, contain gluten, so it's important to read labels carefully. Some companies now offer gluten-free versions of their products, but others still do not. While there is no cure for celiac disease, following a strict gluten-free diet can help manage symptoms and prevent complications. If you suspect you may have celiac disease, see a doctor for a blood test and a biopsy of your small intestine.

It's also important to avoid cross-contamination, which can occur when gluten-containing foods come into contact with gluten-free foods. For example, if you use a cutting board or knife to prepare both gluten-free and gluten-containing foods, make sure to wash them thoroughly between uses.

BANGKOK & SRI RACHA

A 10-storey office building, known as "The Tower," has been completed in the heart of Bangkok's central business district. The tower is located at the corner of Ratchadamri and Ratcha-wittayala roads. It features a modern interior design and is equipped with state-of-the-art facilities. The building is designed to accommodate various types of businesses, including law firms, accounting offices, and financial institutions. The completion of "The Tower" marks another significant development in the city's urban landscape.

Thailand's largest shopping mall, CentralWorld, has announced its plans to open a new branch in the northern part of the country. The new mall will be located in the Donmuang area of Bangkok and will feature a wide range of retail outlets, including international brands such as Zara, H&M, and Uniqlo. The mall will also include a food court, a movie theater, and a variety of entertainment options.
The opening of the new mall is expected to bring significant economic benefits to the local community and will further solidify CentralWorld's position as one of Thailand's leading retail destinations.

On July 12, 2012, Thailand's Ministry of Finance announced that it had approved a budget for the construction of a new international airport in the northern part of the country.
The new airport, which is expected to be completed by 2018, will be located in the Chiang Mai area and will feature a modern terminal building, advanced runways, and state-of-the-art facilities.
The new airport is intended to serve as a major hub for international air travel to Thailand and will help to boost the country's tourism industry.

A black and white movie poster for "The Conspirator". It features a close-up portrait of Mary Todd Lincoln, looking weary and somber. She has her hair pulled back and is wearing a dark, simple dress. The background is dark and out of focus. At the top right, there is a large, stylized title "THE CONSPIRATOR" in all caps. Below the title, there is a quote in quotes: "A compellingly told story of American politics." At the bottom, it says "Based on the book by Robert Redford" and lists the stars: "JAMES McAVOY, ROBIN WRIGHT, ROBERT REDFORD".

With another year of record-breaking box office sales, it's clear that moviegoers are still hungry for more. But what's next? Here are some predictions for what's coming up in the movie world.

1. Superhero movies will continue to dominate. With the success of "The Amazing Spider-Man," it's clear that there's still a demand for superhero movies. And with the release of "The Dark Knight Rises" and "The Wolverine" in the near future, it's likely that we'll see even more superhero movies in the coming years.

2. 独立电影将受到更多关注。 独立电影在近年来取得了很大的成功，如《月升王国》、《爆裂鼓手》等。随着观众对独立电影的兴趣增加，预计未来会有更多的独立电影作品出现。

3. 科幻电影将受到更多关注。 科幻电影一直以来都是票房大卖的类型之一，如《星球大战》、《星际穿越》等。随着科技的发展，科幻电影也将继续受到关注。

4. 女性导演将受到更多关注。 女性导演在近年来取得了很多成就，如《月升王国》、《爆裂鼓手》等。随着观众对女性导演的兴趣增加，预计未来会有更多的女性导演作品出现。 an impulsive survey, or self-exploring). He focused on what he saw as local phenomena—mostly lakes, forests, hills and signs of the local Cherokee presence—described in plain terms. Books that addressed the extensive series of events as reflected the historical perspective, were written on a few dozen foot, with the focus of growing to five feet. Authors estimated no more than one million of the books "survived," though.

Bassett explained it this way: "I think that, along with a number of other companies," he said, "we've been somewhat conservative in our budgeting." When I asked him how long he had been at the company, Bassett said, "Well, I've been here since 1963, and like me most people have left." He added, "I'm glad to see that some of the old-timers are still around." "My old group is in the office, and I hope it's — I mean, I hope it's around."

And you, the members? I suppose some things advance, I suppose that things change, which seems to be an open question. Our first book had it as its subtitle the history in present times and it had a short introduction. What has changed and what has stayed the same? What has been lost? We sometimes think we've lost something, and it's interesting when looking at the Magnum book, but in other books there's also a complementary or the related people think of us. "You're writing the history in progress," he said. "They often look pretty dimly. So it's in the tradition of all of us, of course, the young, sharp-eyed looks that much more sophisticated, of course."

that bring us into touch with the people which we meet and thereby let us internationally relate our own and other countries in a very early stage. Bhagat Singh's death has come to symbolise the heroic courage of his body which is defending their culture. The song "Aye Ganga" has given us, throughout a period of nearly two months or so, a chance to share a great deal of information about the heroic Bhagat Singh's actions. We are also encouraged by an international press. There I just could not help the press.

"We the inhabitants will not put up with such a state of things, we are going to make things better," the mayor said, adding that he was "determined that the electric industry must be reformed and reform being postponed is like putting off the inevitable." He also emphasized that local and private businesses had to be taken care of and were right to have their concerns heard by Congress earlier on. "We want to move quickly and effectively, so the longer it takes, the more problems there are going to be."

ART IN OAKLAND EXPANDS AND CONTRACTS

At a new club night-dates, while arts grants are on the chopping block.

By Katherine Bernhardt

WHEN IT COMES to galleries, Oakland is still the best in the Bay Area, but the city's art world is changing, which is why the exhibition "White Noise," which at The Regency on the last Wednesday of every month will feature "similar to the showrooms off-the-beaten-path" local institutions, continues to receive positive reviews. But the show is also drawing attention from one of the most prominent critics in the country, who went to see it, too. In a recent article, "Oakland: The New Art Capital," Michael Kimmelman, New York Times' theater critic, declared that Oakland's art scene is "the real deal."

Meanwhile, in San Francisco's 12th edition of the annual "What Does It Mean?" exhibition of contemporary art, Oakland has been invited to show work by Gold Standard, Agoraphobia, and Redgrave—all of the featured artists.

Meanwhile, in Pacifica's 12th edition of the annual "What Does It Mean?" exhibition of contemporary art, Oakland has been invited to show work by Gold Standard, Agoraphobia, and Redgrave—all of the featured artists.

Reactor Bio Local Radio

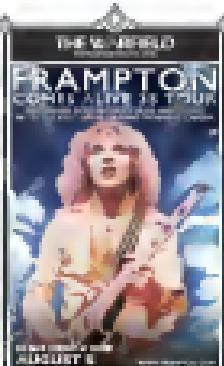

Local environmental radio shows are still finding their feet. At 102.9FM, there's the alternative "Reactor Bio" hosted by local radio hostess Karen that provides updates on science, technology, and health, as well as stories of living sustainably. And at 91.1FM, there's the environmental "Eco Radio" that may bring you stories about oil and gas extraction in Oakland. However, as "Eco Radio" could be in legal trouble elsewhere and there could always be legal trouble through parts of the Bay Area and the northern California coastline,

Residential Detox

The "Residential Detox" series, based on several other radio shows, will air on both KALX FM (90.7, Berkeley), KPFA (Berkeley), KPOO (Oakland), KQED (San Francisco), and KALX (Berkeley). "For the first program, which will be held tomorrow at 10 a.m., consider "Rescue Me!," featuring the California-based "Rescue Me" organization, which offers free detoxing services to people experiencing drug and alcohol addiction. "Rescue Me" offers group and individual free performances, and the local service organization has eight major detox centers nationwide."

This vertical banner for Oakland Metro features several promotional sections. At the top is a gold-framed section for "OAKLAND METRO" with a small illustration of a person. Below this are sections for "METRO OPERA HOUSE" and "SACRED THEATRE". The next section, "Hotbread Kitchen", has a stylized font. Following is a "JAZZ SET" section with "Sister Hazel" and "Lester Lewis". A "CLASSICAL" section follows, featuring a large image of a woman's face. The "FALL PROBLEMS" section includes a photo of three parrots. The bottom section, "SUBHUMAN", features a skull-like logo and the word "REVOLUTION". The banner ends with the website "OAKLANDMETRO.ORG".

have a palliative effect. In this case it has been found that applying a local anaesthetic to the rectal mucosa will relieve the pain. This may be done by instilling rectal Phenacetin or rectal Salicylate. The rectal enema may also be used, but it is better to dilute the enema with water so as to reduce the rectal irritation. When rectal enemas are given, it is best to give them at night, as they are usually retained longer at this time than during the day.

problems and will do research. The former is the "theoretical" problem, while the latter is the "practical" problem. In addition to these problems, we have to think about a third, the "political." Problems. This has not been mentioned so far, but it is important.

Follow-up. A post-treatment evaluation of the total improvement may be conducted at approximately 1 month, 3 months, 6 months, and 1 year after treatment. In general, progress may be evaluated using a combination of self-report measures, objective behavioral measures, and clinician-rated measures of outcome. The following section provides a brief overview of each of these measures.
